- November is National Indigenous Peoples' Heritage Month. It celebrates their Tribal sovereignty and identity and recognizes their essential contributions to public service, arts, humanities, science, and more in our national community. This month also addresses America's harmful past relationship with indigenous peoples by working to improve their health and safety. And one way that you can celebrate is by participating in Diversity Club's trivia wheel activity this Thursday to learn more about indigenous communities. We will also be playing a movie with indigenous representation during Eagle Time in the library!
